Digges, the Populist orator, of Kansas, in an open barouche, with her husband and two daughters. And then appeared the greatest attraction of the whole show, Miss Mamie Coxey, typifying "Peace," mounted on a white paifrey. Miss Coxey is a blonde, with long, waving golden hair, on which the little blue liberty cap sat jauntily. To protect her cream and red complexion from the sun she carried a black parasol. Miss Coxey wore a suit of cream-colored cloth, relieved by a big red bow at the throat. She seemed perfectly at home on the palfrey, but appeared somewhat embarrassed at attracting so much attention. She nodded smillingly at the people who saluted her, and was, altogether, the most pleasing thing in the parade. Two old soldiers, one a Confederate and the other a Federal, both members of the Commonweal, formed her guard of honor, marching on foot.

Carl Browne, Chief Marshal of the Commonweal of Christ, beleathered and befeathered, followed Coxey on Courler, a big white horse owned was three-quarters of an hour in reaching Mount Pleasant, a suburb of the city. At the head of the dusty soldiers of peace were three mounted po-

In his hand he carried one of his cotton banners of peace, and this he waved at the people along the route, smiling and bowing and end-avoring to attract as much attention as possible. He was followed by half a dozen weary privates in single file, carrying the devices painted by Browne. The monweal Band tooted their trombones and corand beat their drums at a great rate. They marched between Browne and Coxes, and gave imitations of "See, the Conquering Hero Comes" an Hail, Columbia." Jesse Coxey, the eighteen-year-old son of Coxey by his divorced wife, dressed in cadet uniform of blue and gray, formed the guard of honor for his father and stepmother.

Delegates from all over the country are here as the gates from all over the country are here as the guests of Local No. 17, one of the youngest and most aggressive of the subordinate bodies. Elaborate preparations have been made for the entertainment of the visitors during their stay in this city, and everything points to the occasion being one of the most auspicious in the history of the organization. The convention will meet twice a day until next Friday.

The most important business that will come before the convention is the subject of affiliation with the American Federation of Labor.

The convention was called to order in the assembly hall of the Eutaw House shortly after 10 o'clock this morning, and the freedom and hospitality of the city was extended to the delegates by Mayor Latrobe.
